

LOWEN HAS BEST CHANCE, EXPERTS POLITICAL EXPERT

Two opportunities for Hiram Johnson. He can make a fight on the convention floor against the treaty of peace and league of nations or else he can attack the Lowden candidacy as the product of money power.

The members of the committee who will draft the Republican platform are practically agreed upon the plan to make the treaty of Versailles. They will favor the treaty of peace and the league of nations and will favor the Lowden candidacy as the product of money power.

Johnson is absolutely opposed to such a plank, yet whether he will consider it worth while to risk the chances for the nomination on such a plank depends upon his sincerity. His ardent admirers insist that he would rather lose the presidency than risk a fight on the convention floor, he would not risk the nomination on such a plank. He will fight, they say, against the treaty with or without any reservations. That is, he will not risk a fight on the convention floor, he would not risk the nomination on such a plank.

Holds Veto Club

Whichever way one turns, it is Hiram Johnson who has the veto club in his hands. He can kill off Lowden and the convention to consideration of the dark horse. His own party has won him support, but the rank and file of the politicians are not so radical and too impulsive to let the Republican nominee.

Frankly, they don't like him, and he knows it. Therefore he has everything to gain and very little to lose by open warfare, and they are sure to follow Johnson on the warpath and the convention, like a big guy, deciding whether the Missouri Republican flash in the pan or a serious flaw in the Republican hopes.

It's Different "Costs No More"

RAILROADS maintain tremendous stations, equipped with every known convenience for the traveling public—yet the cost per mile is no more than the small "jerk-water" train with service not half so good.

WITH a large plant, superior to any in America, and with equipment as modern as human skill can make it, and trained experts in every department — Kraus and Kraus does so excellent work in all cleaning.

In truth—we say—
